1 they raise and the Hepting appeal, wholly apart from standards for injunctive relief.

2 The balance of Plaintiffs' opposition is devoted almost entirely to the Hepting case and 3 proposes myriad discovery and other steps directed at AT&T, notwithstanding the pending 4 appeal. As the United States has previously demonstrated, all of Plaintiffs' proposed activities 5 implicate the key issues on appeal, including but not limited to whether the case must be 6 dismissed at the outset under the Totten doctrine, see Totten v. United States, 92 U.S. 105 (1875), 7 and state secrets privilege; whether Plaintiffs' standing can be established without state secrets 8 confirming or denying whether they are subject to surveillance activities; and whether evidence 9 needed to decide the claims on the merits implicates state secrets.

10 With respect to such activities in Hepting itself, the Hepting appeal has divested the 11 Court of jurisdiction to proceed as Plaintiffs propose. And to the extent Plaintiffs propose such 12 activities in cases other than Hepting (it is hardly clear from their brief that they do), the 13 Government should not be put to the burdens and risks of re-asserting the state secrets privilege 14 as to the very same issues now on appeal up to the point of actual disclosure of state secrets. The 15 Court of Appeals is presently considering whether (and how) the state secrets at issue in these 16 cases should be protected, and whether further proceedings to adjudicate the claims at issue are 17 appropriate. The burdens and harms on the Government and carrier defendants of proceeding as 18 Plaintiffs propose far outweigh Plaintiffs' speculative allegations of harm.¹ These cases should 19 therefore be stayed pending the Hepting appeal.

20 ARGUMENT

21 I. THE GOVERNMENT HAS SATISFIED THE PROPER LEGAL STANDARD 22 FOR A STAY OF PROCEEDINGS.

23 A. The Standards for Injunctive Relief Do Not Apply Here.

24 Plaintiffs erroneously contend that the standard for obtaining injunctive relief applies 25 whenever a party seeks a stay of proceedings pending resolution of related issues on appeal.

26 ¹ As the Government recently notified the Court, any electronic surveillance that was 27 occurring as part of the Terrorist Surveillance Program ("TSP") will now be conducted subject to 28 the approval of the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Court, and the President has decided not to reauthorize the TSP. See Notice by the United States of Attorney General's Letter to Congress (Dkt. No. 127, Jan. 17, 2007)).

1 They are wrong. Those standards apply where a stay application seeks or would have the effect
2 of injunctive relief, such as when a party seeks to stay the injunctive effect of an order pending 3 appeal. Where that circumstance is not present, a party seeking to stay proceedings pending the 4 outcome of a related appellate proceeding need not satisfy the standards for injunctive relief.
5 Instead, as the Supreme Court has observed, “[a] trial court may, with propriety, find it is 6 efficient for its own docket and the fairest course for the parties to enter a stay of an action 7 before it, pending resolution of independent proceedings which bear upon the case.” See Landis 8 v. North American Co., 299 U.S. 248, 254 (1936); see also Levy v. Certified Growers of 9 California, Ltd., 593 F.2d 857, 863 (9th Cir.), cert. denied, 444 U.S. 827 (1979); Mediterranean
10 Enterprises, Inc. v. Ssangyong Corp., 708 F.2d 1458, 1465 (9th Cir. 1983). While the parties 11 may dispute how the Court should weigh the competing considerations, the notion that injunctive 12 standards apply to the question is wrong.²

13 B. The Non-Hepting Cases Should Be Stayed Pending the Hepting Appeal.

14 Plaintiffs next proffer an untenable theory as to why the non-Hepting cases should not be 15 stayed. Plaintiffs contend that “because the non-AT&T cases are not under appeal, it is 16 impossible for the non-movants to meet the likelihood-of-success standard for a stay pending 17 appeal in those cases, since they obviously have no likelihood of a successful appeal where no 18 appeal is pending.” See Pls. Opp. at 8 (original emphasis). This contention is clearly wrong. A 19 movant need not be a party to a parallel appellate proceeding to obtain a stay of its own related 20 proceeding. The Government and non-Hepting movants most surely can obtain a stay of the

23 ² The cases on which Plaintiffs rely are inapposite. In Abassi v. Immigration and 24 Naturalization Service, 143 F.3d 513 (9th Cir. 1998), the party seeking a stay pending appeal 25 sought to halt the operation of a deportation order—very clearly invoking the injunctive powers 26 of the court. Likewise, in United States v. Milligan, 324 F. Supp. 2d 1062 (D. Ariz. 2004), the 27 party seeking a stay sought to halt enforcement of a subpoena—again clearly an issue of 28 injunctive relief. In WCI Cable, Inc. v. Alaska Railroad Corp., 285 B.R. 476 (D. Ore. 2002), the district court declined to stay further proceedings in a bankruptcy dispute pending its own review of an appeal from the Bankruptcy Court concerning whether the defendants in that case had immunity. But a key reason the court denied the stay motion was precisely because, if it ruled against defendants’ immunity claim, district court proceedings would then be stayed pending appeal to the Ninth Circuit.

1 non-Hepting MDL cases on the ground that Hepting raises similar issues that may simplify 2 issues of fact or law in the MDL cases, and that further proceedings in the meantime may be 3 unduly burdensome, ultimately rendered unnecessary, or may harm the movant's interests. See 4 Lockyer v. Mirant Corp., 398 F.3d 1098, 1110 (9th Cir. 2004) (citing CMAX, Inc. v. Hall, 300
5 F.2d 265 (9th Cir. 1962)). Indeed, if Plaintiffs were correct, a party could never seek a stay 6 pending proceedings in another related matter—which is simply not the law. Moreover, the very 7 purpose of MDL proceedings “is to prevent inconsistent pretrial rulings (particularly with 8 respect to matters involving national security), and conserve the resources of the parties, their 9 counsel and the judiciary.” See In re: National Security Agency Telecommunications Record 10 Litigation, 444 F. Supp. 2d 1332, 1334 (J. P. M. L. 2006). The Court undoubtedly has authority 11 to grant the stay relief requested by the non-Hepting defendants.

12 II. THE COURT LACKS JURISDICTION TO PROCEED IN HEPTING.

13 Not until the end of their opposition, after an extensive discussion of specific discovery 14 they believe should proceed in Hepting, do Plaintiffs address the threshold issue of whether the 15 Court even has jurisdiction to proceed in that case.³ As Plaintiffs must acknowledge, an 16 interlocutory appeal divests the district court of jurisdiction as to the particular issues involved in 17 the appeal. City of Los Angeles Harbor Division v. Santa Monica Baykeeper, 254 F.3d 882, 885 18 (9th Cir. 2001) (citing Griggs v. Provident Consumer Discount Co., 459 U.S. 56, 58 (1982); see 19 also Britton v. Co-Op Banking Group, 916 F.2d 1405, 1411 (9th Cir. 1990). Thus, the question is 20 not whether the Court has lost jurisdiction in Hepting (it plainly has), but as to what issues.

21 Plaintiffs contend that the only jurisdictional bar on further proceedings in Hepting is that 22 the Court cannot reconsider its order denying the Government's motion to dismiss. See Pls.
23 Opp. at 38-39. Plaintiffs' analysis is again wrong.⁴ The Ninth Circuit held long ago, in the very 24 context of an interlocutory appeal as to privileged information, that a district court cannot

25 26 ³ The Government does not contend that the Court has been divested of jurisdiction in the other MDL cases by virtue of the Hepting appeal.

27 28 ⁴ To the extent Plaintiffs contend that the Court would be precluded from upholding any further state secrets privilege assertions in Hepting if the case proceeds, on the ground that this would “reconsider” its prior order, that obviously is specious.

1 proceed to consider substantially the same issue of privilege that is pending on appeal. United 2 States v. Thorp, 655 F.2d 997, 999 (9th Cir. 1981) (district court cannot hold attorney in civil 3 contempt for protecting attorney-client privileged information where interlocutory appeal 4 pending as to whether same attorney protecting same information should be held in criminal 5 contempt). The law is clear that a district court can proceed only as to “independent issues 6 presented in the underlying case.” Britton, 916 F.2d at 1405 (emphasis added); Jago v. United 7 States District Court, 570 F.2d 618, 622 (6th Cir. 1978) (matter proceeding in district “did not in 8 any way relate to” matter pending on appeal); Grauberger v. St. Francis Hospital, 169 F. Supp.
9 2d 1172, 1175 n.2 (N.D. Cal. 2001) (further proceedings in district court “does not implicate” 10 issues raised on interlocutory appeal). This well-established rule is an important jurisdictional 11 doctrine intended to “prevent confusion and inefficiency that would result if both the district 12 court and the court of appeals were adjudicating the same issues simultaneously.” Id. (finding 13 jurisdiction over Rule 11 motion for fees because it was “uniquely separable” from merits issues 14 on appeal).

15 Yet proceeding in Hepting on the very same issues that are presently before the Court of 16 Appeals is precisely what Plaintiffs propose. For example, Plaintiffs once again demand the 17 right to obtain discovery as to AT&T’s alleged participation in the alleged surveillance activities, 18 including discovery into allegations about an AT&T facility. Plaintiffs also demand an answer 19 to the Hepting Complaint, which repeatedly raises allegations as to AT&T’s alleged assistance to 20 NSA. Plaintiffs also contend that discovery can proceed with respect to any alleged certification 21 that AT&T may have received from the Government. See Pls. Opp. at 32-35. But the propriety 22 of taking these steps, rather than dismissing the case, is the ultimate issue on appeal, and thus it 23 cannot reasonably be disputed that these are the “particular matters involved in the appeal,” and 24 are not “independent” or “uniquely separable” from those issues. And the mere fact that the 25 Court would adjudicate but not actually order disclosure of privileged information does not 26 somehow render the same privilege assertion distinct from the matters on appeal.

27 Further proceedings in Hepting would also be inappropriate because the threshold 28 question of whether the Hepting Plaintiffs actually have standing has not been—and cannot 1 be—adjudicated without addressing the state secrets issues now on appeal. See USG Stay Mem.

2 (Dkt. 67) at 13-14. It would be wholly inappropriate to permit discovery in Hepting in the 3 meantime.

4 III. A STAY PENDING THE HEPTING APPEAL IS APPROPRIATE IN *HEPTING
5 AND ALL CASES IN THIS MDL PROCEEDING.

6 Assuming, arguendo, that the Court has jurisdiction to undertake further proceedings in 7 Hepting, a stay pending appeal is warranted in that case as well as in the other MDL cases. As 8 the United States has previously demonstrated, the issues of proof and questions of law would be 9 simplified by a stay, and the respective harms the parties may face by a stay or further 10 proceedings tips substantially in the United States' favor. See Lockyer, 398 F.3d at 1110.
11 Indeed, this is essentially the course already chosen by the Ninth Circuit with respect to Al- 12 Haramain v. NSA, 451 F. Supp. 2d 1215 (D. Ore. 2006), in which the Ninth Circuit granted the 13 United States' 1292(b) petition but, recognizing the relevancy of Hepting, stayed briefing of the 14 Al-Haramain appeal.

15 A. The Key Issues Raised in the Hepting Appeal Will Have A 16 Direct Bearing on Further MDL Proceedings.

17 As the United States has already demonstrated, see USG Stay Mem (Dkt 67) at 11-16, the 18 Hepting appeal will address several issues critical to the resolution of the MDL cases, including:

- 19 * Whether disclosure of any carrier-NSA relationship in connection 20 with an intelligence matter is foreclosed by the Totten doctrine.
- 21 * Whether the state secrets privilege precludes disclosure of 22 information pertaining to whether any plaintiff has been subject to 23 NSA surveillance activities and, thus, forecloses them from 24 establishing their standing.
- 25 * Whether the evidence necessary to resolve the issues arising in 26 these cases inherently risks the disclosure of state secrets, 27 warranting dismissal at the outset.
- 28 * Whether any relationship between a telecommunications carrier and the National Security Agency can be confirmed or denied under the state secrets privilege.
- * Whether the state secrets privilege turns on whether the Governments has set forth in its public and in camera, ex parte submissions a reasonable basis that harm to national security would flow from disclosure of the information at issue.

1 * Whether the state secrets privilege precludes disclosure of 2 information concerning intelligence sources and methods 3 necessary to resolve claims on the merits challenging alleged 4 electronic surveillance and the alleged collection of call records 5 information.

6 While the particular parties and circumstances of each MDL case may differ to some 7 extent from Hepting, any one of the foregoing issues would be applicable to the similar issues 8 raised in the MDL cases and could not only dispose of Hepting but each of the MDL cases. At 9 the very least, resolution of these issues will likely simplify the various questions presented by 10 the MDL cases. It makes little sense to “tee-up” these issues now in this Court, as Plaintiffs 11 propose, since further proceedings may either be entirely unnecessary or fail to account for any 12 decision by the Court of Appeals and, thus, not advance proceedings at all. As the Court has 13 already found in certifying the Hepting Order for interlocutory appeal, “the state secrets issues 14 resolved herein represent controlling questions of law as to which there is a substantial ground 15 for difference of opinion, and [] an immediate appeal may materially advance ultimate 16 termination of the litigation.” See Hepting, 439 F. Supp. 2d at 1011 (emphasis added).⁵

17 ⁵ Plaintiffs discussion of recent decisions in related NSA litigation is inaccurate and does 18 not warrant denying a stay. The court in ACLU v. NSA, 439 F. Supp. 2d 974 (E.D. MI 2006)
19 (appeal pending), upheld the Government’s state secrets privilege assertion but entered judgment 20 for plaintiffs based on publicly available information about the TSP. The posture of that case 21 supports a stay here, since another circuit court (which heard oral argument on January 31, 2007) 22 will shortly opine on the proper disposition of the state secrets privilege in a case raising similar 23 issues. The court’s decision in Al-Haramain v. NSA, 451 F. Supp. 2d 1215 (D. Ore. 2006) 24 (interlocutory appeal pending), was similar to this Court’s decision in Hepting, in which the 25 Government’s motion to dismiss was denied, while a final ruling on disposition of the case under 26 the state secrets privilege was reserved. As in Hepting, the court certified its decision for 27 interlocutory review. A motion to stay further district court proceedings in Al-Haramain was 28 fully briefed and pending at the time that case was transferred to this MDL proceeding. Now that an appeal has been taken in Al-Haramain, this Court would be divested of jurisdiction in that case to consider the subject of the district court’s order there—whether the case should proceed in the face of a state secrets privilege assertion. (The Ninth Circuit itself has stayed briefing in Al-Haramain pending disposition of the Hepting appeal.) In Terkel v. AT&T Corp., 441 F. Supp. 2d 899 (N.D. Ill. 2006), the court upheld the Government’s state secrets privilege assertion with respect to Plaintiffs’ allegations that AT&T provided call records information to NSA, finding that the privilege precluded the Plaintiffs’ ability to establish standing. This also supports a stay here, since the identical issue is presented by the Hepting appeal.

1 B. The Balance of Harms Favors a Stay of Proceedings.

2 Plaintiffs' contention that the balance of hardships favors denial of a stay is without 3 merit. Plaintiffs' allegation that they currently face a "dragnet" of ongoing surveillance of 4 virtually all domestic and international communications is of course highly speculative and 5 unfounded. To deny a stay pending appeal based on these mere allegations, where one of the 6 very issues on appeal is whether these allegations can be adjudicated consistent with the state 7 secrets privilege, would be unfounded.⁶

8 Beyond this, to the extent this asserted harm is based, at least in part, on the ongoing 9 existence of warrantless surveillance under the Terrorist Surveillance Program, that aspect of 10 their harm no longer exists since, as the Attorney General has indicated, any electronic 11 surveillance that was occurring under the TSP is now occurring under orders of the Foreign 12 Intelligence Surveillance Court. See Notice, supra (Dkt 127).⁷ Moreover, to the extent 13 Plaintiffs' allegation of harm turns on the alleged collection of telephone records information, 14 the Court previously decided against discovery into that matter, see Hepting, 439 F. Supp. 2d at 15 997-98, and nothing warrants further proceedings now on the issue pending appeal.⁸ As to any

16
17 ⁶ The authority on which Plaintiffs rely to argue that the violation of a statute or 18 constitutional right establishes irreparable harm concerned actions that are known and violations 19 that have been established. See, e.g., Gomez v. Vernon, 255 F. 3d 1118, 1129 (9th Cir.) 20 (affirming injunctive where the record after a nineteen day trial demonstrated prison inmates had 21 been subject to unconstitutional retaliation), cert. denied, 534 U.S. 1066 (2001); Silver Sage 22 Partners Ltd. v. City of Desert Hot Springs, 251 F.3d 814, 827 (9th Cir. 2001) (where jury found 23 violation of Fair Housing Act, irreparable harm established for a permanent injunction); 24 Smallwood v. National Can Company, 583 F.2d 419, 420 (9th Cir. 1978) (permanent injunction 25 issued in retaliation claim where district court found retaliatory intent). A party does not show 26 irreparable harm merely by alleging a statutory or constitutional right has been violated.

27 ⁷ The Government's opening brief in the Hepting appeal is currently due on February 23, 28 2007, and will address the impact of the FISC orders on that case. We defer further discussion of how those orders will impact further MDL proceedings until after our Court of Appeals' filing.

29 ⁸ The Court also found that reliance on hearsay in media reports to decide the key issues here is inappropriate. See Hepting, 439 F. Supp. 2d at 991. Such media reports cannot and do not undermine the state secrets privilege assertion now on appeal. Even when alleged facts have been the "subject of widespread media and public speculation" based on "[u]nofficial leaks and public surmise," those alleged facts are not actually established in the public domain. See Afshar

1 alleged harms beyond these two claims, Plaintiffs have not proposed that their claims be 2 adjudicated to conclusion, only that some effort to be made to advance proceedings in the event
3 of a remand in Hepting. But there is no assurance that any proceedings will materially advance 4 the litigation, and, thus, resolution of Plaintiffs' remaining alleged harms, since the outcome of 5 the Hepting appeal is not known. Depending on how the Court of Appeals rules, further 6 proceedings may prove to be futile and fail to advance the process at all.

7 With respect to the countervailing harms faced by the Government and 8 telecommunication carrier defendants, Plaintiffs contend that no harm would arise from any 9 further proceedings because the Government may simply renew its state secrets privilege 10 assertion, either as to specific discovery demands in Hepting or through motions to dismiss and 11 discovery in the MDL cases. See Pls. Opp. at 17-18. But aside from the unnecessary burden of 12 repeating the state secrets privilege process in Hepting and the other MDL cases, Plaintiffs' 13 proposal would impose real and immediate harms, not conjectural ones. Plaintiffs propose an 14 array of activities in Hepting that would directly implicate the state secrets privilege including 15 answering a complaint that repeatedly alleges that AT&T assisted NSA in intelligence 16 activities;⁹ discovery into allegations by Mr. Klein concerning NSA's alleged use of an AT&T

17 _____ 18 v. Department of State, 702 F.2d 1125, 1130-31 (D.C. Cir. 1983). To the contrary, where such 19 public speculation is widespread, forcing an "official acknowledgment [or denial] by an 20 authoritative source" can "cause damage to the national security," which is not required. Id. This 21 is true regardless of whether the statements come from a member of the legislative branch who 22 reportedly was provided with certain information or others. See Terkel, 441 F. Supp. 2d at 914 23 ("Treating confidential statements to Congressional representatives as public disclosures that 24 make an otherwise secret activity a matter of public knowledge would undermine the state 25 secrets privilege by forcing the executive branch to give up the privilege whenever it discusses 26 classified activities with members of Congress."). Authority permitting a party to use hearsay 27 evidence when it seeks emergency injunctive relief is plainly inapposite here. See Flynt 28 Distributing Co. v. Harvey, 734 F. 2d 1389, 1394 (9th Cir. 1984) (only when the urgency of obtaining preliminary injunction exists, where it is difficult to obtain timely affidavits from persons who would be competent to testify at trial, may the trial court give inadmissible evidence some weight for the purpose of preventing irreparable harm before trial). Indeed, a key issue on appeal in Hepting is whether evidence can be received on these issues.

⁹ Plaintiffs' demand that AT&T provide an answer to the complaint, see Pls. Opp. at 32-33, is especially pointless, not only because the Court certified whether a motion to dismiss that very complaint should have been granted, but because no benefit would be served by an ex parte,

1 facility; discovery into whether AT&T (or any carrier) has received certifications to assist NSA 2 in intelligence matters; and so on. Such matters go to the core state secrets issues on appeal, and 3 if such discovery were permitted could moot all or a substantial part of the appeal.

4 As the Court is aware, the process involved in asserting the state secrets privilege 5 (whether in response to specific discovery requests or in connection with a dispositive motion) is 6 complex, extremely sensitive, and requires substantial care. Despite the closest adherence to 7 secure procedures, merely litigating disputes even before disclosure is finally ordered, or indeed 8 even if it is never ordered, can risk real harm. Any information in the parties' filings or judicial 9 opinions—even matters that seem innocuous to those unaware of the actual facts—could tend to 10 reveal details that might confirm or deny what is a state secret and thereby causing potentially 11 grave harm to national security. The broad attention that litigation of this nature draws heightens 12 the risk of proceeding by amplifying all that is said and done. The physical task of preparing, 13 securing, and transmitting files also poses risks of disclosure at different stages. It is not 14 conjectural that these risks will be incurred if these cases are permitted to proceed; opening the 15 door to such risks makes little sense while an appeal is pending that may close it (or substantially 16 limit any further inquiry). See Sterling v. Tenet, 416 F.3d 338, 344 (4th Cir. 2005), cert. denied, 17 126 S. Ct. 1052 (2006) (courts are “not required to play with fire and chance further 18 disclosure—inadvertent, mistaken, or even intentional—that would defeat the very purpose for 19 which the privilege exists.”).

20 IV. FISA SECTION 1806(f) IS INAPPLICABLE HERE.

21 Plaintiffs also argue (at inordinate length) that the availability of Section 106 of the 22 Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act of 1978 (“FISA”), as amended, codified at 50 U.S.C.
23 § 1806(f), weighs against a stay because this provision can be utilized to resolve disputes over 24 classified information in further proceedings. See Pls. Opp. at 18-22; 3, 9, 32-36. Since a short 25 reply does not permit a full response on this important question, the Court should receive

26 _____
27 in camera answer where the Government has already apprised the Court of the underlying 28 privileged facts at stake, and the process of redaction presents significant risks. See Case Joint Case Management Statement (Dkt. 61-1) at 31 (Government’s Position on Hepting Answer).

1 separate briefing on the matter if further proceedings are not stayed. For now, United States 2 briefly summarizes its position as to why Section 1806(f) does not apply in this case.

3 As the United States has previously demonstrated, viewed in its proper context, Section 4 1806(f) is part of a statutory scheme that provides a “procedural mechanism by which [FISA] 5 information may be used in formal proceedings.” Sen. R. No. 95-701, 95th Cong., 2d Sess., at 62 6 (1978), 1978 U.S.C.C. & A.N. 3973, 4031. Section 1806(f) addresses cases in which the 7 Government intends to use FISA information against an “aggrieved person” and establishes a 8 procedure that may be invoked by the Government if a litigant seeks to suppress the fruits of 9 FISA collection or obtain disclosure of FISA applications, orders or other related information.
10 Contrary to Plaintiffs’ characterization, Section 1806(f) is a grant of authority to the Government 11 enabling it to invoke special ex parte, in camera review procedures in defending against 12 challenges to the Government’s use of evidence drawn from FISA surveillance. This provision 13 applies in three circumstances: (i) when a governmental entity gives notice under 14 Section 1806(c) or (d) that it intends to use evidence obtained from such surveillance against the 15 aggrieved person; (ii) when the aggrieved person seeks to suppress that evidence under Section 16 1806(e); and/or (iii) when the aggrieved person moves or requests “to discover or obtain” FISA 17 “applications, orders or other materials” related to the surveillance or the evidence or information 18 derived from the surveillance. See 50 U.S.C. § 1806(f). Section 1806(f) may be invoked “if the 19 Attorney General files an affidavit under oath that disclosure or an adversary hearing would 20 harm the national security of the United States.” See id. A district court would then consider, in 21 camera and ex parte, classified materials as may be necessary to determine whether the 22 surveillance of the aggrieved person was lawfully authorized and conducted. See id.

23 The threshold issue raised by Plaintiffs’ reliance on Section 1806(f) is whether it may 24 even be applied in civil cases, such as Hepting and the pending MDL cases, where alleged 25 unlawful surveillance has never been confirmed or denied and, indeed, is subject to a state 26 secrets privilege assertion. Plaintiffs take one phrase in section 1806(f) out of its statutory 27 context and argue that the provision provides independent authority to seek materials related to 28 electronic surveillance under FISA or otherwise through a motion in any civil proceeding. See

1 Pls. Opp. at 21. Nothing supports this reading.

2 In the first place, for Section 1806(f) to apply, a person must be “aggrieved” as defined 3 by FISA— that is, the person must be “the target of an electronic surveillance any other person 4 whose communications or activities were subject to surveillance.” 50 U.S.C. § 1801(k).
5 Turning the statute on its head, Plaintiffs read Section 1806(f) to permit discovery into the very 6 issue of whether someone is an aggrieved person within the meaning of FISA. Plaintiffs would 7 thus transform this provision into an engine for anyone to discover whether they have been 8 subject to surveillance by filing a suit and a motion to compel. Plaintiffs do not cite a single case 9 in support of this radical theory. All of the reported cases that we have found apply section 10 1806(f) where the United States or State government has sought to use evidence related to 11 electronic surveillance in judicial proceedings and is responding to a suppression motion, or has 12 invoked 1806(f) to protect against the unauthorized disclosure of FISA applications, orders and 13 related information.¹⁰ In addition, all of the courts addressing motions to disclose or suppress 14 FISA evidence reached a conclusion as to the legality of the surveillance based on an in camera
15 and ex parte review.¹¹ Thus, Plaintiffs’ suggestion that Section 1806(f) be use to grant them 16 access to classified materials is unfounded and contrary to established law barring such access.

17 In addition, the fact that Section 1806(f) applies to civil challenges to alleged unlawful 18 surveillance, see Pls. Opp. at 21-22 (citing H.R. Conf. Rep. No. 95-1740, 1978 U.S.C.C.A.N.
19 4048, 4061 (Oct. 5. 1978), does not mean the provision authorizes discovery of whether such

1 surveillance has in fact occurred.¹² The D.C. Circuit’s decision in ACLU Foundation v. Barr, 2 952 F.2d 457 (D.C. Cir. 1991), is instructive on this issue, and Plaintiffs’ attempt to distinguish 3 Barr is meritless. Plaintiffs contend that Barr holds only “that the particular facts of the 4 individual case supported the conclusion that disclosure to the aggrieved person was not 5 necessary.” Pls. Opp. at 22. That is not so. The court in Barr held that the plaintiffs who 6 merely alleged ongoing surveillance were not entitled to use FISA procedures to discover 7 whether they were in fact subject to surveillance. The case arose out of deportation proceedings 8 in which the United States had acknowledged that six individuals had been subject to FISA 9 surveillance. See id. at 458-59. The United States later petitioned the United States District 10 Court for Central District of California for a determination on the legality of the FISA 11 surveillance under Section 1806(f) and the district court upheld the lawfulness of the 12 surveillance under that provision. See United States v. Hamide, 914 F.2d 1147 (9th Cir. 1990).
13 The six individuals who had been subject to the prior acknowledged surveillance, and eight 14 others who alleged continuing surveillance, then filed suit in the District of Columbia.

15 Distinguishing between the two groups of plaintiffs, the D.C. Circuit held that the six 16 individuals whose surveillance had been upheld in the California §1806(f) proceeding that had 17 been invoked by the Government were barred from raising statutory and constitutional claims 18 attacking the legality of the acknowledged surveillance. With respect to those who alleged 19 ongoing surveillance that had not been acknowledged, the D.C. Circuit reversed dismissal of 20 their claims on the ground that the claims should have been resolved under Rule 56 summary 21 judgment proceedings, not under Rule 12(b)(6). See Barr, 952 F.2d. at 469.

22 But the court in Barr agreed that FISA did not permit discovery into whether surveillance 23 had occurred, noting that “if the government is forced to admit or deny such allegations, in an 24 answer to the complaint or otherwise, it will have disclosed sensitive information that may 25 compromise critical foreign intelligence activities.” Id. at 469 & n.13 (“The government makes 26

27 ¹² Likewise, nothing supports the notion that Section 1806(f) applies generally to any 28 proceeding in a civil case that might involve classified information, such as merely answering the complaint, as Plaintiffs’ contend, see Pls. Opp. at 32-33.

1 the point, with which we agree, that under FISA it has no duty to reveal ongoing foreign 2 intelligence surveillance”). See also In re Grand Jury Investigation, 431 F. Supp.2d 584 3 (E.D.Va. 2006) (denying notice under FISA Section 1806(c) of whether grand jury witnesses had 4 been subject to the Terrorist Surveillance Program, as well as notice under 18 U.S.C. § 3502(a) 5 since witnesses had made no prima facie showing that they were an “aggrieved persons” under 6 that provision); In re Sealed Case, 310 F.3d 717, 741 (For. Intel. Surv. Rev. 2002) (FISA does 7 not require notice to a person whose communications were intercepted unless the government 8 “intends to enter into evidence or otherwise use or disclose” such communications in a trial or 9 other enumerated official proceedings;” otherwise ““the need to preserve secrecy for sensitive 10 counterintelligence sources and methods justifies elimination of the notice requirement.””) 11 (citing Senate Report 95-701, 95th Cong., 2d Sess., at 12 (1978), 1978 U.S.C.C.& A.N. 3973, 12 3980); In re Grand Jury Proceedings, 856 F.2d 685, 688 (4th Cir. 1988) (grand jury witness not 13 entitled to notice of alleged surveillance under FISA Section 1806(c)).¹³

14 In addition, nothing in Section 1806(f) or its legislative history demonstrates any 15 intention on the part of Congress to preclude the Government from asserting the state secrets 16 privilege to protect the disclosure of national security information, including information that 17 would confirm whether a particular individual was subject to electronic surveillance as defined 18 in FISA. As the Supreme Court has instructed, “[i]t is a well-established principle of statutory 19 construction that “[t]he common law . . . ought not to be deemed repealed, unless the language of 20 a statute be clear and explicit for this purpose.”” Norfolk Redevelopment and Housing Authority 21 v. Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Co. of Norfolk, 464 U.S. 30, 35-36 (1983) (citation 22

23 ¹³ Indeed, on the point that it reversed the district court, the D.C. Circuit in Barr held 24 that, in a Rule 56 summary judgment proceeding, “the government would need only assert that 25 plaintiffs do not have sufficient evidence to carry their burden of proving ongoing surveillance 26” Barr, 952 F.2d at 469. The court could not have reached this result if the Plaintiffs 27 reading of Section 1806(f) were correct. Rather, the court found that only if the plaintiffs could 28 defeat summary judgment might Section 1806(f) apply. See id. Among the issues raised by the Government in its motion for summary judgment in Hepting is that the fact of any surveillance of Plaintiffs could not be confirmed or denied. Under Barr, only if the state secrets privilege were rejected on summary judgment, and surveillance acknowledged, would Section 1806(f) apply.

1 omitted). Plaintiffs' contention that Section 1806(f) supercedes the state secrets privilege 2 because it applies "notwithstanding any other law" is specious. That is hardly the kind of clear 3 expression required to abrogate a constitutionally-based power of the Executive. Indeed, the 4 legislative history of the FISA does not indicate that the phrase "notwithstanding any other 5 provision of law" in Section 1806(f) was meant to supplant a long-standing, well known, 6 constitutionally-based privilege held by the Executive to protect national security information 7 whenever a motion is filed in any case to discover the existence of surveillance. On the contrary, 8 Section 1806(f) is a shield that may be invoked by the Government, not a sword that can be used 9 by an "inventive litigant" to avoid Section 1806(f) by relying on "a new statute, rule or judicial 10 construction" or other sources of law when challenging the legality of surveillance. See S. Rep.
11 No. 95-701, 95th Cong., 2d Session, at 64 (1978), 1978 U.S.C.C.A.N. 3973, 4033.

12 Accordingly, since a key issue in the Hepting appeal is whether the Government's state 13 secrets privilege assertion should be upheld, Section 1806(f) could not be utilized until after the 14 Hepting appeal is resolved in any event because that privilege assertion encompasses 15 information concerning whether any plaintiff in this MDL proceeding is actually subject to 16 surveillance and, thus, sufficiently aggrieved as defined in FISA to permit use of Section 17 1806(f).

18 CONCLUSION

19 Plaintiffs' opposition presents no basis in fact or law for undertaking further proceedings 20 in Hepting and the other cases in this MDL proceeding. For the foregoing reasons, the United 21 States' motion to stay MDL proceedings should be granted.¹⁴
