

Did You Know?

By Kris L. Canaday, Freelance Paralegal

It's hard to believe almost three months have passed since I started the blog Paralegal Support 101 for attorneys. While I have lots of information to share, I really wanted to start by explaining the role of paralegals in the legal profession and defining freelance (aka contract, aka virtual) paralegals and paralegal services since both topics serve as the basis for the blog. The posts relating to paralegals and freelance legal support focused on answering the questions attorneys most frequently ask. The result can almost be described as a mini-series on each topic. Here's a recap on what you'll find so far.

Information on paralegals and the paralegal profession

The Paralegal Profession: A Brief History for Attorneys

[The Paralegal Profession: \[Almost\] everything you wanted to know but were afraid to ask](#)

Paralegal Do's and Don'ts: What can \(and can't\) a paralegal do for you

What? You don't have a license to practice as a paralegal?

Information on freelance legal professionals and freelance legal support

You're a what? Freelance Paralegals Defined

Why Would I Need a Freelance Paralegal?

Are There Benefits to Working with a Freelance Paralegal?

Thanks, But We're Not Hiring . . . Freelance Legal Professionals

Finding a Freelance Paralegal That's Right For You

Some of this information will be expanded on in more detail at some point in the future. But there's also much more to come. For now, though, I'm pleased that the information most sought after is now accessible to everyone. Enjoy!

© 2011 Kris L. Canaday

First posted February 28, 2011, at <http://www.paralegalsupport101.com/2011/02/did-you-know/>