

Bunn Recalls More than 35,000 Coffee Makers

by John Demas on 05/22/09 at 10:01 am

Bunn is one of the leading manufacturers of coffee makers, and it produces machines of all shapes and sizes. One popular item in its product line is the single cup brewing model, and unfortunately for thousands of consumers who use them, they may have been unwittingly at risk every time they turned the power on to brew a cup of coffee. This was brought to light based on the announcement that Bunn is initiating a massive recall for these products.

According to Consumer Reports:

“Bunn has recalled 35,600 single-cup pod brewers because the drawer of the coffeemaker can open unexpectedly during a brew cycle, posing a burn hazard to consumers. The company has received 10 reports of the drawer opening inappropriately, including one report of minor burns.

The recall includes the MCP (My Café Pourover) and MCA (My Café Automatic) models with the following serial numbers (located on the bottom):

- MCA: MCA0001000 through MCA0015807
- MCP: MCP0001000 through MCP0029895

The Consumer Product Safety Commission is advising consumers to stop using the recalled coffeemakers and contact Bunn to obtain two replacement pod drawers.”

Perhaps the most dangerous part of using a defective product is that no one suspects that it's defective until it's too late. As a result, people are completely exposed to serious injuries given their inherent vulnerability. If you or someone you love has been injured by a defective product, contact the Sacramento products liability attorneys at Demas & Rosenthal today to schedule a free initial consultation. The firm has been representing clients successfully against negligent corporations for many years.