Independent Thinkers Who Don't Buy into Negativity are More Prosperous

I talk a lot about success. How to find it. How to live with it. How to keep it.

But let us not forget about the big elephant in the room: Prosperity.

Money is the endgame for a lot of people; they use it to measure their own success. Prosperity, on the other hand, encompasses money, happiness, and plain good fortune - something all of us want.

Author Randy Gage knows a little something about prosperity.

Gage is a former criminal who rose from a jail cell as a teen to become a self-made multi-millionaire. He has also written eight books.

The following is a list of Habits of Prosperous People - as presented by Gage to KCAL 9 TV in Los Angeles.

Prosperous people...

- 1. Choose their desires, passions and thoughts. They mold the inner world of their mind and reconcile it to external things to develop a prosperity consciousness. It's not about earning money, finishing projects, or acquiring things. It's about rising above the turmoil and becoming your true nature – becoming prosperity.
- 2. Practice affirmations to create a prosperity mindset. Once you create the right mindset, you attract the people, circumstances, and opportunities you need for abundance and prosperity. You literally change the way you think.
- 3. Are committed to learning and working on themselves everyday, developing skills, collecting knowledge and most importantly, gaining wisdom.
- 4. Are committed to bringing value to others. They understand all true prosperity is a value-for-value equation, so you must go out and create value for the people around you.
- 5. Are dreamers. Instead of thinking about what is “realistic,” people with prosperity consciousness dream about what they really want in life. They imagine a better way, then work to make it so.
