Case Before the Court:

Chaker v. Crogan: Respondent, Darren Chaker, was convicted by a jury for filing a knowingly false complaint of peace officer misconduct in violation of California Penal Code § 148.6. Respondent alleges that California Penal Code § 148.6 violates the First Amendment because the statute targets only knowingly "false" speech critical of peace officer conduct during the course of a complaint investigation. Petitioner, Alan Crogan, the San Diego Police Department and State of California, argue that the case is moot and that California Penal Code § 148.6 does not violate the First Amendment. The United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit held California Penal Code § 148.6 in violation of the First Amendment and ruled that the case was not moot. The United States Supreme Court granted certiorari on these two issues.
