At least one person was seriously injured in three vehicle Rancho Cordova car accident early this morning on westbound Highway 50 near the Zinfandel Drive exit. Details as to how the collision occurred are sketchy at this point, but it reports indicate that at least three cars were involved.

It is unclear who was responsible for causing this Rancho Cordova injury accident. Sometimes the CHP traffic collision report will help determine who was at fault based on witness statements and the physical evidence at the scene of the collision. However, further investigation, including accident reconstruction, is sometimes necessary to get to the bottom of which driver or drivers were entirely or partly at fault.

Anyone seriously injured in a California auto accident has a number of complicated issues to deal with after a collision like this. First, legal responsibility for the collision must be determined, sometimes requiring investigation beyond what is contained in the police report. Second, the medical bills must be paid. Even if there is health insurance to pay for the bills initially, the health insurance company will likely seek reimbursement from any liability insurance recovery. That means that the health insurance company will be competing for money that otherwise would go to the injured victim. Third, when there are multiple people injured in a crash, they will often be competing for a proportional share of a limited amount of insurance money.

Lastly, insurance companies will do whatever they can to avoid paying fair compensation for not only medical bills, but lost income and pain and suffering as well. It is important that injury victims in these situations consult with an experienced and reputable California personal injury law firm to protect their rights.
