iPad Apps for Trial Lawyers

July 11, 2011 by Admin - BN

The iPad is turning out to be a very useful tool for litigation attorneys, including personal injury lawyers. There are a number of iPad apps that have been developed over that past year that are intended to assist litigators at all stages of a case, from drafting pleadings and taking depositions to choosing a jury and trying a case.

Let's begin with a few pre-trial apps available that might be of interest to trial attorneys.

First, there's The Deponent App ($9.99), which assists lawyers in preparing for and taking depositions. You can find a review here at the Court Technology and Trial Presentation blog.

The iPleading App ($9.99) is intended to assist lawyers in drafting a pleading. You can find a review here at the Lawsites blog.

Finally, The Mobile Transcript App (free) allows lawyers to review and annotate depositions on their iPads. You can find a review here at iPhone JD.

There are also a few apps that assist lawyers in choosing juries.

First, there's Jury Tracker ($4.99) You can find a review here at the Court Technology and Trial Presentation blog or here at TabletLegal.

Jury Duty ($29.99) is another similar app. You can find a review here at the Court Technology and Trial Presentation blog.

Finally, there's iJuror ($9.99). You can find a review here at the Court Technology and Trial Presentation Technology blog.

And, finally, the trial presentation apps.
