How Do You Spell “VISA”?

September 10th, 2011 by admin

Foreign nationals who wish to come to the U.S. for any of a variety of purposes can do so, provided they follow the correct procedures to apply for and procure the correct Visa for their needs.

For those who don't even know where to begin, this blog presents an organized summary of the types of Visas available in the “alphabet soup” of U.S. Visa options. Below you can find a list of Visas by category and purpose:

A Visas: for diplomats, ambassadors and their relatives

B Visas: for business visitors (B-1) and for tourists (B-2)

C Visas: for travelers passing through the U.S. in transit

D Visas: for crewmembers of ships passing through the U.S.

E Visas: for certain investors and specialty occupations based on foreign country treaties

F Visas: for students

G Visas: The G-1 through G-5 visas are only for NATO or UN employees and certain other employees of international organizations or specified, recognized governments

H Visas: These types of visas fall into several subcategories (which are explained further in another posting) and are available for those who wish to work in the U.S.

I Visas: for certain media members coming to the U.S.

J Visas: for professors, research scholars, teachers, camp counselors and certain other specified individuals involved in foreign exchange programs
