

返答

作成者: Takamitsu Naito/AMANO/JP 作成日: 2001/07/03 10:16
内藤 隆光 (シー・エス・ジェー)

件名: 2001/06/22 Reply

送信者: Takamitsu Naito 日付: 2001/06/22 19:39
宛先:

宛先:	dolf@certifiedtime.com	宛手氏名:
cc:	Mark.Williams@certifiedtime.com Junichi Minamoto/AMANO/JPCAMANO Masamiki Konno/AMANO/JPCAMANO Tadahiro Sato/AMANO/JP
送信者:	Takamitsu Naito/AMANO/JP	内藤 隆光	シー・エス・ジェー

件名: Reply 箇

Dear Dolf;

I confirmed your E-mail.

First of all, I want to put personal feelings aside.

When we received your "Final update" E-mail yesterday, we realized that OTI is not going make any further update on the system and we are loosing your support. We were forced to take and freeze the system as is.

As you know, it is obvious now that the obligations of the license agreement will not be completed by OTI and we are not able to start commercial operations as is and that is a reality we are facing with.

As AMANO Corp. invested 750K as a license fee, we need to secure the investment and the system as is. We must protect them from any further change by anyone. ( Please do not take this personally. Anyone can be anyone who may obtain the password. )

Especially we need to protect our public service which we committed with NIST by securing network equipment.

Therefore, before we talk about "right to make change", we took the risk control action to ensure us to execute our obligation to the public, with NIST and what we have committed with our Japanese Government.

However, as you notice that we did not block Web app. and DB system to respect your own right.

If you consider what AMANO has invested for and what we have now, I believe that you understand our risk management decision.

By the way, a little after our telephone conversation, we noticed that we were no longer able to logging in to the Web App. Now we have no access to Admin. and Customer function at all.

Do you have any idea, why that happened ? AMANO Corp. uses the service internally for synchronizing entire computer in AMANO, testing and monitoring Tokyo

AC 002551

Timing Center. Please verify.

We are looking forward to have your reasonable judgment or discussion at executive level.

I am looking forward to have your reply soon.
I can check my E-mail during weekend.

With Best Regards,

Tak Naito

<<-- "Dolf Starreveld" (dolfs@certifiedtime.com) -->> 2001/06/22 16:21 Wrote:

Gentlemen,

While I attempted to do some cleanup in the Tokyo timing center tonight, I noticed that the passwords to some equipment were changed. Since I know GTI did not do this, I telephoned Tak Naito and asked about this. Although he initially hesitated, he confirmed that the passwords had been changed. I informed him that this equipment is ours, and still being managed by us, and Ameno has no right to make these changes without informing us and giving us the new passwords. I asked that the passwords be restored immediately. He stated that this would need to be discussed with management. I repeated my request for immediate restoration of the passwords, which was refused.

I explained that as an executive of GTI, I had to inform him that this could not, in any way, be perceived as a friendly act. He said he understood. I informed Tak that this was now out of my hands and that I would inform Mark.

I would have to say that, given the fact that earlier today Minamoto San was discussing with Mark to come to the US on Monday to talk about things, I do not understand these actions at all. They can hardly make any positive contribution, and are not what I expect from senior executives. It saddens me deeply that Ameno's executives have felt that they have to act in such an unprofessional manner.

This email serves mostly as a formal summary of my perception of the events of tonight, but perhaps you can respond by confirming that you have changed the passwords, and explaining why. Of course you can also respond by informing us of the new passwords. I look forward to your reply when I come into the office in the morning.

--dolf

AC 002552