Posted on May 5, 2010 by D. Todd Smith

The Texas Supreme Court has amended its recent order requiring submission of documents in electronic form. Among the changes to the previous version are requirements that attorneys (1) provide an e-mail address when submitting e-copies, (2) e-mail courtesy copies to opposing lead counsel, and (3) register for CaseMail in cases in which they are lead counsel. The order—which takes effect on May 31, 2010—also reduces the number of paper copies required whenever a party files a motion with the Court.
