Housewives Star Teresa Guidice Exits Bankruptcy

Teresa Guidice of 'Real Housewives of New Jersey' and her husband Joe are ready to make a fresh start after the star emerged from bankruptcy. The couple filed for bankruptcy protection in October last year after a series of failed real estate investments left them $11 million in debt.

In an entry in her blog, the 38-year old Bravo reality star stated, "It's not a fun or an easy process. If you've ever been unfortunate enough to be involved in a legal situation, you know it's a lot of back and forth between both sides. Right now, our bankruptcy trustee is trying to get an auction going, and our lawyer is objecting it.

Every day, there are new tactics used, stories circulated, and details 'leaked' to the press, but it's all part of the legal wrangling. All I can do is rise above it, keep my head high, and know that at the end of the day, I have my family, my health, and I'm in God's hands. Nothing else matters, certainly not a lamp."

Guidice went on to say, "We worked so hard for so many years and it was heartbreaking to file, and not something we took lightly. Of course you can't sit in your bed and just cry all day, so we moved forward, got new jobs, and are working hard once again. The point is to get a fresh start so you can move forward."

Despite putting up the contents of their mansion for auction, the last episode of the show showed the couple celebrating their 10th wedding anniversary where Joe bought Teresa a diamond and took her for a flight on a private helicopter.

The star is involved in charities, some of which are Project Ladybug, charities for pancreatic cancer, autism, AID for AIDS International, the Red Cross and Clean the World, to name a few. This September, Guidice will be spending her Labor Day weekend at My Big Gay Italian Wedding for four days in a row for charity.

Guidice has had her fair share of controversies. Recently a charity complained about her alleged unwillingness to appear for them unless she was paid. But Guidice has strongly denied the allegation, saying she had never heard of them. According to Guidice, the charity contacted the agent who books her in clubs and was told he does not do charities. He then told them to contact Guidice directly, which the star maintains is easy to do through her website.
