

Building Moratorium Initiative

As you may have learned from the news, a group called Coalition to Preserve L.A. (CPLA) is seeking to place an Initiative on the ballot in 2016 that would establish a City-wide building moratorium. Click here for a copy of the Initiative.

The key provisions include:

- A two year building moratorium against the approval of any project that seeks a General Plan amendment or a zone change that would result in more intense land use, Fair Acquisition Regulation (FAR), density or height.
- A two year building moratorium against the issuance of any building permit for a previously approved project that entailed a General Plan amendment or a zone change that would result in more intense land use, FAR, density or height.
- Prohibits the reparation of an EIR or other CEQA document by the project applicant or a consultant under contract with the applicant. Instead, documents must be prepared by City staff or a consultant under direct contract with the City.
- No amendment to the General Plan can be approved that would facilitate the approval of a specific development project.
- Amendments to the General Plan would be limited to geographic areas that have a "significant social, economic or physical identity," which is defined as an entire community plan area, specific plan area, neighborhood council area, or area of 15 acres or greater.
- In approving a General Plan amendment, the City must demonstrate that the amendment is consistent with all elements of the General Plan.

Alston & Bird will be working with various business coalitions to oppose this Initiative, including the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce.
