ESTABLISHING A BUSINESS ENTITY IN CZECH REPUBLIC

“Establishing a Business Entity in the Czech Republic”

1. Types of business entities

Investors may choose from the following forms of corporate structure:

- Limited liability company
- Joint-stock company
- Limited liability partnership
- General partnership
- Cooperative
- Branch

1.1 Limited liability company

A limited liability company (LLC) is the most frequent corporate structure used in the Czech Republic. An LLC is founded by a Memorandum of Association, if there is more than one founder, or a Foundation Deed, if there is a sole founder. No minimum registered capital is required by law for an LLC; the law only requires the minimum contribution of each shareholder in the amount of CZK 1. However, it is advisable to count on a reasonable starting amount for the registered capital for financing the launch of the business and thus avoid the application of the insolvency test from the very beginning.

Monetary or non-monetary (in-kind) contributions are allowed, namely real or personal property, certain intangible assets, and existing and documented due debts. The value of in-kind contributions is subject to an official valuation. Generally, before applying for incorporating a company, the premium and at least 30 percent of each monetary contribution must be paid up. The outstanding amount must be paid up upon agreement between the shareholders within five years at the latest. Contributions in-kind must be paid up in full before the company is incorporated.

The company is owned by one or more individuals or corporations. Each shareholder holds an "ownership interest" which corresponds to a percentage of the total registered capital. As of 2014, an LLC with a sole shareholder can also be the sole shareholder or founder of another limited liability company.

The company itself is wholly liable for any breach of its obligations with all its assets. The liability of a shareholder for the company's obligations is limited to the unpaid amount of the shareholder's contribution.

Consequently, shareholders in a limited liability company are not liable for the company's debts provided they have paid up their contributions in full. The "qualified" shareholders may exceptionally become liable for a company's debts by application of the rules on company groups, namely in insolvency, e.g., if they, through their control or influence, significantly affect the conduct of the company to the detriment of the company.

1.2 Joint-stock company

A joint-stock company (JSC) is established by adopting By-laws. From 1 January 2014, there is no distinction between private and public JSCs. The minimum registered capital is CZK 2,000,000, or EUR 80,000 if the company chooses to keep accounts in EUR. There are no requirements for a minimum shareholder contribution. The company is owned by one or more individuals or corporations.

Both monetary and non-monetary (in-kind) contributions are allowed, namely real or personal property, certain intangible assets, and existing and documented debts owed to the founders. The value of in-kind contributions is subject to an official valuation. Before incorporating a new JSC, the premium and at least 30 percent of the nominal value of shares must be paid up. The outstanding amount must be paid up in line with the By-laws within one year from the incorporation of the company at the latest.

The company itself is wholly liable for any breach of its obligations with all its assets. Shareholders in a joint-stock company are not liable for the company's debts. Certain "qualified" shareholders may exceptionally become liable for a company's debts by applying the rules related to company groups, namely in insolvency, e.g., if they through their control or influence significantly affect the conduct of the company to the detriment of the company.

Every joint stock company must have a website providing information about the company's name, registered seat, business identification number and incorporation data with the commercial register including the section and file and publish various documents such as invitations to general meetings.

1.3 Limited liability partnership

A limited liability partnership is a less frequently used corporate form. It must be founded by at least two individuals or companies, at least one of which ("limited partners") must contribute to the registered capital an amount set by the foundation document. Limited partners are liable for the company's debts up to the unpaid amount of their contribution. However, if the name of a limited partner appears in the name of the company, the limited partner's liability for the company's debts is unlimited.

On the other hand, the other partners ("general partners") are not obliged to contribute to the registered capital. However, their personal liability for all the company's undertakings is unlimited.

1.4 General partnership

A general partnership must also be founded by at least two individuals or companies. Registered capital is not created, and all shareholders have an equal interest in the company, unless agreed otherwise in the partnership agreement. All partners are fully and personally liable for all the company's undertakings.

Beside monetary and non-monetary (in-kind) contributions, partners can also contribute to the company's capital by providing work or services if agreed in the foundation document.

1.5 Cooperative

This legal form is not suited to the purposes of commercial undertakings. It is a traditional legal form frequently used for the ownership of private residential property.

1.6 Branch

A branch, although it can be registered in the Czech Commercial Register, is not a legal entity. As it is not treated as a legal entity all legal acts taken by a branch are considered to be taken on behalf of its founder, which may be a foreign company. This may complicate the branch's operations and day-to-day business.

A branch is established upon the execution of a founding document known as the resolution of foundation. Its form depends on the requirements set up by the law governing the founder. Having at least officially certified signatures on the document is always advisable. A branch must obtain the corresponding trade licenses or other permits necessary to do business, which correspond to the activities of the founder.

A branch must have a director who is an individual generally registered in the Commercial Register and who executes all legal acts relating to the maintenance of the branch on behalf of the founder. There is no requirement under Czech law regarding a branch's registered capital.

1.7 Entities under European law

The European Company or Societas Europaea (SE) and European Economic Interest Grouping (EEIG) are also considered as business entities, which may operate in the Czech Republic.

2. Steps and timing to establish

Generally, a company is established in two steps: 1. founding the company by adopting a foundation document, and 2. registering the company with the Commercial Register.

Founding a company does not mean it legally exists. In the period between its foundation and establishment the company does not have legal personality (it cannot acquire rights or obligations) and its statutory bodies do not yet exist. Company shareholders are only in the position of founders and not shareholders.

The Company's founders must authorise a person to administer the paid-up capital before incorporating the company. The administrator, often one of the founders or a bank, is obliged to take custody of the founders' contributions. In addition, they are obliged to provide a written statement on how much capital has been paid up, which must be attached to the application for registration in the Commercial Register. Upon establishing the company, these deposits become the property of the company, which may from that moment on freely dispose of them.

Before being established the company must obtain a business license (such as a trade or other license). The trade license is certified by an extract from the Trade Register held by the Trade Licensing Office. The company acquires the trade license, in the extent of the registered scope of business, from the date it was established.

A newly founded company must be registered with the regional Commercial Register before it can become a legal entity. Commercial Registers in the Czech Republic are kept by Regional Courts or the Municipal Court of Prague. Corporate information on existing companies such as business name, address, authorised representatives, registered capital and certain other information can be found in these registers accessible online.

In general, if an application to register a company in the Commercial Register fulfils all the requirements and all necessary documents are supplied, then the company will be registered within five working days of the application being filed. If the registration is done directly by a notary public, the company may be registered within one day.

3. Governance, regulation and ongoing maintenance

3.1 Corporate governance

Corporate governance is vested in the company's bodies and varies by the type and size of company.

For capital companies, the supreme body is always the general meeting of shareholders.

In a limited liability company, the obligatory company bodies are the general meeting and one or more executive directors or board of executive directors if allowed by the foundation documents; establishing a supervisory board is optional. Executive directors must act with due diligence and care and follow the principles and resolutions passed by the company's general meeting in compliance with law and the Memorandum of Association or Foundation Deed. They may not disclose sensitive and confidential information to third parties. If they breach these obligations, they are personally liable for all damage caused by the breach. They must also respect the non-competition clause envisaged by the Act on Business Corporations, which may be extended by the Memorandum of Association or Foundation Deed. Such a ban can be, however, waived by all shareholders.

Joint-stock companies may choose between the dualistic model and the monistic model of corporate governance. The dualistic model requires the establishment of a board of directors and a supervisory board, whereas the monistic model means a board of administrators and statutory director. Business management is therefore executed either by a board of directors (in the dualistic model) or by a statutory director (in the monistic model), who must follow the same rules as executive directors in a limited liability company. In the monistic model, the supervisory board is substituted by a board of administrators, having mixed competences, which means that they combine the rights and duties of the supervisory board in the dualistic model on the one hand and decide on the strategic orientation of the business management and supervise its execution by the statutory director on the other.

The supreme body of a partnership (both a limited liability partnership and a general partnership) is constituted of all partners, who are all equal and hold one vote each, unless stated otherwise in the partnership agreement. Business management is generally executed by either every partner in a general partnership, or every partner with unlimited personal liability in a limited liability partnership. Establishing a supervisory board is voluntary.

Corporate governance rules are more detailed and rigid from 2014. Members of statutory bodies are obliged to perform their offices with the required loyalty, knowledge and care – with due diligence. A corrective to the strict rules of due diligence, called the business judgment rule, has been introduced. The rule states that a member of the statutory body is acting with due care and with necessary knowledge if he/she can in good faith reasonably assume when making his/her business decisions that he/she has acted in a well-informed manner and in the defensible business interests of the business corporation.

If a member of the statutory body breaches his/her obligations, he/she must return any profit obtained in connection with such breach or, as the case may be, provide indemnification of material and non-material damage in cash.

There is an obligation of the member of the statutory body to return the profit obtained under a contract on the performance of the office and all other profits from the company received in the two years preceding a decision on bankruptcy, if he/she was aware or should and ought have to been aware of the fact that the business corporation was under imminent threat of bankruptcy, and contrary to acting with due diligence did not take all the necessary and reasonable steps to avert bankruptcy.

Under certain conditions a member of the statutory body can be excluded by the court from his/her office in any business corporation in the Czech Republic, and during this exclusion cannot be appointed to any such position.

If a statutory body member fails to settle damages to the business corporation caused by breach of obligation in the performance of his/her duties, he/she is liable for the debt of the business corporation towards the creditor to the amount of non-settled damages if the creditor cannot satisfy its debt from the business corporation. Apart from liability for damage pursuant to the Insolvency Act when failing to submit an insolvency petition or for its late submission, a member of the statutory body might be under certain circumstances liable for fulfilling all the obligations of the business corporation if a legal decision on bankruptcy was issued.

Members of a company's bodies also have several other obligations, such as notification duties. For example, they must inform the supervising or supreme body if their interest conflicts with the company's interests, or if they intend to conclude a contract with the company.

Special attention is to be attached to the contract executed between the member of the statutory body and the company to avoid a situation where his/her performance of the office will be for free.

A company's problem-free existence is also ensured by what is known as an insolvency test which prohibits the company to pay out the profit if it caused its own bankruptcy.

3.2 Reporting requirements

An existing company must regularly publish in the Commercial Register, in particular the following documents:

- (i) annual reports,
- (ii) annual, extraordinary and consolidated financial statements (if not included in the annual report),
- (iii) proposal for distributing profit and its final form or settling losses, if not included in the ordinary financial statement,
- (iv) auditor's report certifying the financial statement, and
- (v) report on relations between related parties.

The annual reports and financial statements must be certified by an auditor before being published if the conditions of the accounting act are fulfilled.

Beneficial owners of corporations are registered in a specific register of beneficial owners held by the Commercial Register. For the time being, the register is not publicly accessible.

3.3 Requirements for local shareholdings/directors

For shareholders, there are no requirements in respect of their nationality – they may be either Czech or a foreign individual or company.

As for the executive directors and members of various boards, they may be either a Czech or foreign individual or a company (except for a statutory director of a joint stock company or chairperson of the board of administrators, who must be an individual). Individuals must meet several requirements, for example, they must be 18 years of age, have a clean criminal record, consent with their registration, and fulfil other conditions imposed by law. Companies are in the performance of their function in a company's body represented by an authorised individual representative who must fulfil the abovementioned requirements as well.

Foreign nationals do not need a residence permit in the Czech Republic to be registered with the Commercial Register in a Czech company, though this may subsequently be required for non-EU nationals for living or working in the Czech Republic.

3.4 Protection of minority shareholders

In a JSC, minority shareholders are those who own at least 3 percent of the registered capital if the registered capital is more than CZK 100,000,000, 5 percent of registered capital if the registered capital is CZK 100,000,000 or less, or at least 1 percent of the registered capital if the registered capital is CZK 500,000,000 or more. They are granted several minority rights, such as the right to ask the board of directors or the statutory director to summon an extraordinary general meeting to discuss issues proposed by them, or to have an issue proposed by them included in an ordinary general meeting, and the right to ask the supervisory board to examine the performance of the board of directors in matters determined by request.

They may, either through the board of directors or directly, require the payment of the outstanding part of the issue price from shareholders in default, or seek compensation for damage caused by members of the statutory body who have not acted with due diligence. They can also ask for the appointment of an expert to examine the report on relations between connected persons.

They also have several rights during transformation procedures and squeeze-outs.

The minority shareholders' position may also be strengthened during elections of company's bodies by "cumulative voting". For the purposes of the election, each shareholder's vote is multiplied by the number of elected members of the company's bodies. A shareholder may then give all his/her votes to a single candidate or divide the votes among more candidates which gives minority shareholders a greater possibility of influencing the body's composition.

Additionally, shareholders in LLCs have similar rights, though the percentage limit may differ, and in certain cases each LLC shareholder is entitled to act so.

4. Foreign investment, thin capitalisation, residency and material visa restrictions

4.1 Thin capitalisation rule

Thin capitalisation rules govern the maximum amount of tax-deductible interest and other related financial costs (such as credit processing) paid on credits and loans in situations where they exceed the limits imposed by the Income Taxes Act (ITA). Thin capitalisation rules apply to credits (loans) involving related parties

4.2 Related-parties' transactions

Transactions between related parties must comply with the arm's-length principle (that is, by applying fair market prices). Otherwise, the tax administrator may adjust the tax base of the party involved in the transaction by the difference between the price actually charged and the fair market price and may assess additional tax and impose related penalties (including late payment interest on the additionally assessed tax). Certain exceptions to this rule relate to the interest on credits and loans.

According to the Guidelines of the Czech Ministry of Finance, OECD Transfer Pricing Guidelines apply in the Czech Republic.

4.3 Permanent establishment

Income derived through a permanent establishment of a foreign company located in the Czech Republic is regarded as Czech-source income.

A permanent establishment is defined as a “fixed place of business through which the business of an enterprise is wholly or partly carried on.” A place of management, a branch, an office, a factory, a workshop and a mine, an oil or gas well, a quarry or any other place of extraction of natural resources are always considered fixed places of business.

Providing services such as consultancy or management will create a permanent establishment if the services are rendered in the Czech Republic for more than six months in any consecutive 12-month period (unless a Double Taxation Treaty states otherwise). Similar rules generally apply to a construction site, an assembly line and other installation projects (but Double Taxation Treaties often impose specific conditions as far as construction sites are concerned).

A foreign company or individual who has a permanent establishment in the Czech Republic is obliged to register with the Czech Financial Authority and to file annual income tax returns.

4.4 Withholding taxes

Withholding tax is applied to certain types of income earned by Czech tax residents and to a number of Czech-sourced types of income earned by Czech tax non-residents. The tax rate is 15 percent. However, the withholding tax rate applicable to the Czech sourced income of Czech tax non-residents as stipulated by the ITA may be reduced by the relevant Double Taxation Treaty. In case of income from Czech sources paid to taxpayers who are tax residents from countries that are not EU and EEA members, did not conclude a DTT with the Czech Republic, and did not conclude a bilateral agreement on exchange of information concerning income tax with the Czech Republic or a similar agreement on a multi-national basis, the withholding tax rate is increased to 35 percent.

Tax payers and EU residents can file an income tax return in which related expenses can be applied and withholding tax is considered an advance payment. However, this is only possible for certain types of income, namely royalties, interest, income from contractual penalties and remuneration for members of statutory bodies.

No withholding tax is applied to dividends if the payer and recipient qualify as a subsidiary and a parent company within the meaning of the EU Parent Subsidiary Directive (for further details see Harmonisation with EU Tax Legislation below) and in certain cases of interest payments under the conditions stipulated by the ITA.

4.5 Avoidance of double taxation

To date the Czech Republic has concluded 88 Double Taxation Treaties which closely follow the wording of the OECD Model Tax Convention. Double Taxation Treaties, among other things, can reduce the withholding tax rate applicable to Czech tax non-residents’ income from Czech sources and stipulate the method for the avoidance of double taxation to be used with respect to particular types of income. The Double Taxation Treaties usually stipulate the application of either the exemption (exemption with progression) or simple credit methods. If no Double Taxation Treaty has been concluded between the Czech Republic and the respective country, the Czech sourced income of foreign tax residents will be subject to Czech taxation under Czech tax law.

4.6 Harmonisation with EU tax legislation

In relation to the accession of the Czech Republic to the EU on 1 May 2004 EU Directives concerning direct taxation (income taxation) were incorporated into the ITA.

Based on the so-called Parent Subsidiary Directive (and related amending Directives), dividends and other profit share distributions between Czech and EU companies which meet the definition of a parent company and its subsidiary are not subject to corporate income tax. To qualify as parent and subsidiary companies, companies must fulfil the following conditions:

- the companies must take a legal form listed in the respective EU Directives,
- the minimum capital holding in the subsidiary is 10 percent and is held by the parent company for an uninterrupted period of at least 12 months (can be fulfilled subsequently),
- the companies must be EU member state tax residents,
- the companies must be subject to corporate income tax as stated in the respective EU Directives.

Similar conditions also apply if dividends are paid by a Czech subsidiary to its mother company if it is a tax resident of Switzerland, Norway, Iceland or Lichtenstein.

4.7 Further corporate tax exemptions

Tax exemptions for dividends and other profit share distributions have been extended to profit share distributions paid to a Czech tax resident (and to a Czech permanent establishment of a tax resident of another EU member state) by a subsidiary which is a tax resident of a state which has concluded a Double Taxation Treaty with the Czech Republic. Besides conditions like those already stipulated for the tax exemption of share distributions paid between companies within the EU, subsidiaries from third states must also meet further conditions, such as being subject to a minimum 12 percent tax rate in their home country.

Under similar conditions as for shares in profit, the tax exemption further applies to the income of a parent company, being a beneficial owner, which is a tax resident of the Czech Republic or a Czech permanent establishment of a Czech tax non-resident from another EU member state, from the sale of a share in the subsidiary (which is a tax resident of the EU or a third state which has concluded a Double Taxation Treaty with the Czech Republic).

4.8 Residency and visas

The majority of Czech immigration regulations are contained in the Act on the Residence of Aliens in the Czech Republic No. 326/1999 Coll., as amended, and Regulation (EC) No. 810/2009 of the European Parliament and of the Council of 13 July 2009, establishing a Community Code on Visas (Visa Code). The basic rules regarding EU and non-EU nationals are as follows:

4.8.1 Residency of EU nationals

All EU nationals who work or live in the Czech Republic enjoy equal treatment as do Czech nationals. To commence work or to take up a position of a statutory body member with a Czech company, neither a work permit nor a visa is required for an EU member state national. If an EU national is employed with a Czech employer only a notification form must be filed and passed over for statistical purposes to the local labour office. An EU member state national does not need a temporary or permanent residence permit to reside in the Czech Republic. An EU member state national is only obliged to register with the Local Office of the Foreign Police if they expect to stay in the Czech Republic longer than 30 days.

A similar regime applies to family members of EU nationals who reside in the Czech Republic with the EU national. The family members of EU nationals, who intend to reside in the Czech Republic with the EU national for a period longer than three months, are however obliged to apply for a temporary residence permit within three months of entering the Czech Republic.

4.8.2 Third country nationals

Council Regulation No. 539/2001 lists the third countries whose nationals must be in possession of visas when crossing external borders and those whose nationals are exempt from that requirement.

Third-country nationals not subject to the visa obligation may stay in Schengen states for up to 90 days within a 180-day period from their first entry. The duration of individual stays in different Schengen states cumulates.

Third-country nationals subject to the visa obligation may enter and stay in the Schengen area only on the basis of a uniform visa for stays up to 90 days (short-term Schengen visa) which allows the holder to stay on the Schengen territory for the period stipulated in the visa, which does not exceed 90 days within a 180-day period. The 90-day period starts from the date of first entry into Schengen territory.

Those who have already stayed in Schengen states for 90 days within a 180-day period must leave the Schengen area unless they are in possession of a Schengen visa with limited territorial validity or a national residency title issued by a Schengen member state, such as a long-term visa or a long-term residence permit.

Long term visas are granted for the specific period of the stay corresponding to the purpose of the stay and the validity of the submitted documents but have a maximum duration of one year. Generally, if a validity of a long-term visa is shorter than one year and if the purpose of the stay still applies, the long-term visa can be extended repeatedly, but no more than for one year. The application to extend the long-term visa must be submitted at the earliest 90 days and at the latest before the long-term visa expires.

Third-country nationals who hold long term visas are entitled to file an application for a long-term residence permit if they intend to reside in the Czech Republic for a period longer than one year and if the purpose of stay is the same as indicated on their long-term visa. A long-term residence permit can be continuously extended. The application for a long-term residence permit and the application to extend the long-term residence permit must be submitted at the earliest 120 days before the long-term visa or the long-term residence permit expires and at the latest before the long-term visa or the long-term residence permit expires.

Applicants can apply for a visa at the Czech embassy in their country of origin (for certain third-countries the application can be filed at any Czech embassy) and for a long-term residence permit, with certain exceptions, at the relevant department of the Ministry of the Interior. The applications to have a long-term visa or a long-term residence permit extended can be submitted at the relevant department of the Ministry of Interior. The application should be decided within 15-30 days (short term Schengen visa), 90 days (or 120 days in complicated cases) for a long-term visa, or 60 days for a general long-term residence permit.

With certain exceptions, long term visas and long-term residence permits for employment purposes are no longer granted. All non-EU nationals applying for work in the Czech Republic and intending to reside in the Czech Republic for more than 3 months are required to obtain an employment card, a blue card or an intra-corporate transferee card. These are specific residential titles allowing a non-EU national simultaneously to reside and work in the Czech Republic. The employment card is a general residence title for employment purposes whereas the blue card is intended for highly skilled employees, as a university education and relatively high salary are required and the intra-corporate transferee card is intended for selected employees, namely managers, specialists and trainee employees who are subject to an intra-corporate transfer to the Czech Republic. With certain exceptions, applications for an employment card, a blue card or an intra-corporate transferee card must be submitted, in person, by an applicant at a Czech embassy.

In certain cases, such as when a non-EU national intends to reside in the Czech Republic for fewer than 3 months, he/she is posted by his/her foreign employer to perform work in the Czech Republic, or he/she is employed as a seasonal worker, a work permit is required in addition to a Schengen visa (residence up to 3 months); or a long-term visa (a seasonal worker whose residence exceeds 3 months) or an employment card (posting of an employee, other cases) is required. In these cases, a non-EU national applies for a work permit and subsequently for an appropriate residence permit. Applications for a work permit are submitted by the applicant, or by an attorney authorised under a power of attorney, to the relevant Labour Office, generally before their arrival in the Czech Republic. A work permit is usually issued within 30-60 days of the application being submitted. Under specific conditions, such as when a non-EU national has completed his/her education in the Czech Republic, the obligation to obtain a work permit may be avoided.

5. Changes expected in 2021

On January 1, 2021, an important amendment to the Act on Business Corporations will become effective. The amendment will involve a decrease in certain administrative burdens and the improvement of certain instruments which in practice proved to have posed issues. In particular, the monistic model of joint stock companies will be modified in a substantial way. Companies will have one year in order to adapt their foundation documents so that they are in line with the new legal requirements.
