

Florida Workers' Compensation Fees

Recently, an injured employee from Miami, Florida called seeking advice about an injury she suffered in Broward County, Florida. After speaking with this very nice woman for a few minutes, I realized one of her main concerns was how she was going to pay for an attorney's services.

Apparently, following the filing of the workers' compensation incident form by her employer, she began receiving letters from attorneys offering their services. When she called one of the attorney's offices she was told she would have to pay a fee to speak with a live attorney, but that in doing so this attorney would be able to get her all kinds of benefits. I advised her that we never charge a consultation fee and we don't make promises without even speaking to a potential client. I explained how we work on a contingency fee basis; that means we don't take any money from a client as an up-front charge and we only get paid if we win your case.

You should never have to pay a Florida or Georgia workers' compensation attorney a fee to tell them what is going on with your injury. If you do speak to a law firm and they require you to pay a fee to simply talk about the possibility of hiring them then hang up and call an attorney at the Law Offices of Franks and Koenig. We are ready to speak with you for free about your workplace injury.

We are happy to review your injury for free and you can call us at any time at (877) WE-CAN-HELP (877-932-2643) or visit us online and submit an online application today.

Florida or Georgia, if you have suffered an exposure, accident or been involved in an injury at work, call us right away.
