

5 KEY TAKEAWAYS

The Law of Advertising

Kilpatrick Townsend partners Ty Lord and Laura Miller and Jeremy Liebman, Senior Counsel at Krispy Kreme, recently discussed “The Law of Advertising” at an Association of Corporate Counsel CLE \(Charlotte Chapter\).

Key takeaways from the presentation include:

1

Increase the Legal IQ of the Marketing Team

- They train your business to spot hot button issues.
- Partner with the business so that feel comfortable getting legal involved early.

See It All: Context Matters

- Don't review advertising statements in a vacuum; other content and imagery can convert puffery into a claim that requires substantiation.
- Substantiation must support the claim. Get behind the testing to ensure compliance.

2

3

Consumer Protection is Key

- Literally true statements can nevertheless deceive consumers. Consumer perception is the key question.
- Promotions must disclose a material connection between the advertising and the influencer. Consumers have a right to know when influencers have received something of value from the advertiser when reviewing a post.

Promotions on Social Media ARE Advertising

- Sharing, re-posting, retweeting photographs requires permission from the original posters. Sending a Direct Message asking for permission is not onerous and gets advertisers the permissions they need.
- Spot right of publicity issues in photographs and images.

4

5

No Good Deed...

- Think through the logistics and messaging of a promotion to prevent consumer deception.
- Charitable sales promotions, cause marketing and commercial co-venture

For more information, please contact

Ty Lord at tlord@kilpatricktownsend.com or Laura Miller at lamiller@kilpatricktownsend.com