SBA Issues New PPP Rules for Owner-Employees and Related

Party Rents

The Small Business Administration ("SBA") recently issued a new interim final rule clarifying whether paycheck protection program ("PPP") loan proceeds may be used for certain payroll and non-payroll costs and remain eligible for forgiveness, notwithstanding earlier guidance or uncertainty. Generally, PPP loans may be forgiven so long as used for a borrower's payroll costs (generally, all compensation, capped at $100,000 on an annual basis, plus benefits) and certain mortgage interest, rent and utility expenses.

Navigating the Minefield of Legal Challenges as Employees Return to Work

Employers face a host of potential legal pitfalls as businesses that were closed in response to the COVID-19 pandemic reopen and new virus hotspots continue to emerge across the country. As guidance from state and federal agencies continues to evolve, it is important for employers to develop a plan to address both the legal and practical considerations for safely returning employees to work.

Economic Effect of COVID-19 Shutdowns and Paycheck Protection Program Relief

Closing in on five months after the initial COVID-19 shutdown, it is apparent that most, if not all, industries have been affected by shutdowns, restrictions, and quickly changing guidelines and best practices. Physician practices and other health care providers were among the hardest hit, effectively closing in most states for seven weeks (or more), coupled with elective procedures at a virtual standstill. As restrictions have lifted and companies have made appropriate health and safety-related changes to policies and procedures, many people are back to work, but most would probably agree that things look and feel different, and the financial impact of the crisis still remains.
