Two separate events are highlighted this week in our continuing coverage of high tech meetings and conferences in the Silicon Valley and San Francisco areas. Both are on the same day so if interested you'll have to make a difficult decision.

First up, the Social Media Club Silicon Valley is hosting a discussion of Security and Social Media at 6:30 pm on Thursday August 25, 2011. Panelists include the COO and Co-Founder of Reputation.com (Owen Tripp) and a fellow with one of our favorite job titles in recent memory, Security Ninja, Google (Billy Rios). The event takes place at Talenthouse, 542 High St., Palo Alto, CA.

Thirty miles away in San Francisco, you'll find Whitetruffle's Startup Speed Dating, a social event that allows engineers the opportunity to meet startups in quick 5 minute chats that allow both sides to see who they'd like to follow up with. It's speed dating for job hunters so you better come prepared with your personal pitch honed to quick perfection. The event also takes place on August 25, 2011, starting at 7:00 pm at SOMACentral, 153 Townsend St., San Francisco, CA.
