

What to Bring to Your Attorney For Your Initial Meeting

Posted by Andrews Law

What to Bring to Your Attorney For Your Initial Meeting: When we have an initial meeting with a client after a motor vehicle accident case they need to know what they should have if anything prior to the first meeting. So I figured this blog could help with that. The necessities are a copy of the police report, a copy of your your insurance policy declaration page, and your driver's license. It is also good to have a copy of the discharge papers if you went to the hospital, and your health insurance information, any property damage estimates and photos of your vehicle. Without essential information like this early on in the case the settlement will be delayed and my clients do not receive their money in a timely fashion. The point here is that you should always ask your attorney what you need to bring. Depending on the type of matter, he will advise you accordingly.