Flavio Stella

Giovanni Sartori:

Strictly speaking, political liberty, freedom is a liberal wins, accomplished with the rule of law and constitutional law established by the technique. It 'a victory not because the Liberal Liberal has discovered the modern idea of freedom (political) individual, but because he has found a way to guarantee it by inserting it in the structures of public law (...) The liberal freedom is the resolution of the problem of freedom in relation to resolution of problems of legality.
[Taken from: Democracy and definitions, Fourth Edition, Il Mulino, Bologna 1976, p.184].