

DUI for Drugs

By: Jeremy Geigle, Attorney at Law
JacksonWhite, P.C.

In Phoenix Arizona, a DUI for drugs is a serious offense. If convicted, one of the most severe consequences is that you might have your driver's license suspended for one year. Since the possible punishments can be very difficult, you should contact a Phoenix DUI attorney for assistance as soon as possible. A Phoenix DUI attorney can assess your case and help you prepare for your defense in court. Furthermore, there are some drugs that can stay in your system for days after you take them. Marijuana can also stay in your system for 30 days or more. As a result, a Phoenix DUI attorney will be able to review your case and look for any possible holes in the prosecution's case against you. With an experienced Phoenix DUI attorney on your side, they can even work to negotiate a lesser punishment for your charge.

If you've been charged with a DUI or driving under the influence of drugs in Phoenix Arizona you should contact a Phoenix DUI attorney for assistance.
