

It's 2012 – Are You Ready For Paid Sick Leave?

By Daniel Schwartz on January 3rd, 2012

It's finally here: Paid Sick Leave.

Connecticut officially became the first state in the nation to mandate this on Sunday. Depending on your perspective, it's either a historic achievement or another sign that Connecticut is anti-business.

I've talked about this extensively over the last six months so I'm not going to repeat the summaries here.

But suffice to say that if you haven't looked into this yet for your workplace, time's up.

This blog/web site is made available by the host/publisher for educational purposes only as well as to give you general information and a general understanding of the law. It is not intended to provide specific legal advice to your individual circumstances or legal questions. You acknowledge that neither your reading of, nor posting on, this blog site establishes an attorney-client relationship between you and the blog/web site host or the law firm, or any of the attorneys with whom, the host is affiliated. This blog/web site should not be used as a substitute for seeking competent legal advice from a licensed professional attorney in your state. Readers of this information should not act upon any information contained on this website without seeking professional counsel. The transmission of confidential information via Internet email is highly discouraged. Per a June 11, 2007 opinion of Connecticut's Statewide Grievance Committee, legal blogs/websites, such as this one, may be deemed an "advertisement" under applicable rules and regulations of Connecticut, and/or the rules and regulations of other jurisdictions.