Medline, the largest medical supplier in the United States has joined the nation's long-term care leaders to meet with congressional leaders on health care initiatives affecting seniors and the nursing home industry.

Medline has sponsored the American Health Care Association and National Center for Assisted Living's annual Congressional Briefing for the last seven years. The meetings allow long-term care leaders to discuss long-term care legislative issues, including Medicaid reform and quality of care standards for both patients and residents, with members of Congress and their staff.

Shawn Scott, senior vice president of Medline, describes Medline's support as standing "shoulder to shoulder with the long-term care community on the most important issues that affect the wellbeing of our industry and the health of the residents we serve."
