Florida Municipalities Getting Hammered with Ransomware

Security researchers have warned municipalities repeatedly about how they are being targeted with ransomware, that they are at high risk, and the need to make data security a high priority.

Municipalities are unfortunately only taking heed now that recent ransomware campaigns are in the news and bringing some municipalities to their knees [view related posts here and here].

All municipalities should be on high alert as the ransomware attacks are coming hard and fast.  $\underbrace{Read\ more}$

A Value Add to Employee Security Education: Mobile Apps

While we have been talking about the very important message of educating employees about data security, I find that giving employees tips about their personal data security keeps them interested and engaged during education sessions. It is surprising how little people in general, and employees specifically, know about their personal devices and the security of such devices. Read more
